LARRY ANDRE
Business Owner

My Top Priority, Student Success.
High-paying skilled jobs have been leaving California. One of the best ways to bring those jobs back is to build a highly trained workforce. That begins with education.
Not every student follows the same path. Some will earn a university degree. Others will build successful careers through career and technical education, apprenticeships, certificate programs, or workforce training. Hundreds of rewarding careers require education beyond high school, and every path deserves respect, support, and opportunity.
Our community colleges must prepare students for college transfer and high-demand careers. This means expanding career education, strengthening partnerships with local businesses, industry, labor organizations, and providing training that leads directly to good-paying careers.
California needs more skilled workers in construction, manufacturing, healthcare, technology, transportation, public safety, and many other essential industries. Our colleges must provide the knowledge, technical skills, hands-on experience, and problem-solving abilities employers need.
As Trustee, I will work with local, state, and federal elected officials to secure funding to build modern campuses, expand career training facilities, and provide the classes, equipment, and student support services needed for success.
Together we can build stronger students, stronger families, a stronger workforce, stronger communities, and a stronger California tomorrow.
