

IMRAN SHARIEF

Doctor/Businessman

I am running for Mayor to restore trust in City Hall, keep Anaheim safe, invest in the parts of town that feel forgotten, establish deeper partnerships with our business community to incentivize growth, and address the homeless issue with empathy and enforcement. These principles are rooted in our shared experience living in the city we call home.

I'm married to my strongest supporter, and have four wonderful children who went to school in Anaheim. I was born and raised in Karachi, Pakistan, where my mother and father taught me early: help people in need. Through school and training, I worked to become a doctor, and now I spend my days ensuring families get the help they need. As a doctor, I know how to respond quickly to save lives, and as the next Mayor I will respond to any situation with the same precision.

Outside the patient room, I've devoted my life to service. As the chairman of various local non-profits and community organizations, I've worked with lawmakers locally and nationally to impact policy that betters our community and building strong coalitions. Getting the job done for my community is not a partisan issue, it is a practical one.
