KATHLEEN TRESEDER
Councilmember, City of Irvine/Educator

My name is Kathleen Treseder. I am a scientist, not a politician. As a professor at University of California, Irvine, I work every day to find facts and uncover truth, to find solutions and push for progress.

For the last four years, I have been honored to serve as your City Councilmember. I have brought the same approach I bring to my lab and my classroom to City Hall.

I have pushed for reforms to clean up City Government, including balancing our budget and banishing corrupt lobbyists. I believe Irvine will work better for everyone when everyone can be sure their voice and the needs of their neighborhoods are heard. When Live Nation wanted a sweetheart deal to profit off public spaces, I stopped the corporate giveaway.

I have worked to expand access to green spaces and parks. As a mom and a climate scientist, I know how important protecting our outdoor spaces are to our health.

I am running for re-election because there is more work to do. We must strengthen our businesses while protecting our workers. We must solve the affordable housing crisis to ensure every family can prosper. And we must never stop fighting for our progressive values that keep us strong.
