Preserving our roots. Living the mission. Preparing for the future.

Mission Viejo has always been more than a place to live, it is a community built on strong neighborhoods and families who care deeply for our city. As your candidate for City Council, I am committed to preserving the values that have made Mission Viejo one of the best places to call home while ensuring we are prepared for the opportunities and challenges of tomorrow.

As a husband, father, Army veteran, executive HR leader, and community volunteer, I have spent my career bringing people together, solving complex problems, and making thoughtful decisions that put people first. I believe local government works best when it listens before it leads, remains fiscally responsible, and delivers practical results for residents.

My priorities are clear: keep our neighborhoods safe, protect taxpayer dollars, maintain our parks, roads, and public spaces, and prepare Mission Viejo for the future through smart technology, economic resilience, emergency preparedness, and efficient city services.

I am running because I believe we can honor Mission Viejo's proud legacy while embracing thoughtful innovation that benefits every generation. Together, we can preserve what makes Mission Viejo special, live the mission that inspired our city, and confidently prepare for the future.
