SANTOSH SABNIS
Business Owner/Father

As a Placentia resident, business owner, and father, I have spent over twenty years helping organizations eliminate waste, improve operations, and make financial decisions using data and technology. I am running for City Council because City Hall should manage your hard-earned tax dollars with the same care you use at your own kitchen table.

Just like any major family investment, asking tough questions before money is spent prevents costly financial surprises down the road. Every public expenditure must meet a strict standard: What are we paying for? What value are we getting? What happens if things go wrong? Will this still benefit our community ten years from now?

By aggressively eliminating waste, we can reinvest savings into protecting home values, helping families call Placentia home, supporting local job-creating businesses and responsible new development, investing in our city employees, maintaining safe streets and parks, strengthening public safety, and providing opportunities for our children and seniors.

I built the Placentia Civic Vault, a free public tool, so you can easily understand where your tax dollars go. As a dad raising my daughters here, keeping Placentia safe, thriving, and affordable is personal. I would be honored to earn your trust and vote.
