

SOUTH COAST WATER DISTRICT DIRECTOR

NAME: WAYNE RAYFIELD

AGE: 74

OCCUPATION: Retired Geophysical Engineer

The trend is clear - our imported water supply is becoming increasingly scarce and expensive. South Coast Water District must continue to partner with other agencies and neighboring cities to develop new water sources such as desalination. It must continue to inform customers about why and how to conserve water, expand and encourage the use of recycled water and ensure that every operating and capital expense is cost-effective.

The District must continue its "zero spill" policy for sewage to protect ocean water quality and the quality of life in our area.

As a former Dana Point Mayor and Councilmember, and as a current Board Member for the State Regional Water Resources Control Board, San Diego Region, I have the experience, background and proven desire to help the District face the challenges ahead. As a Director, I will: work to apply relevant lessons from other areas to the District's needs; seek partnerships with other agencies and cities; promote water conservation, source expansion, cost-consciousness and clean water; and, aggressively seek outside funding for District projects.

As I did as a Councilmember, I will listen and be attentive to your suggestions, complaints and observations about the District.
